American Jewish Committee Conclave Studies New Approaches To Security Problem

[illegible] American Jewish Committee [illegible] meeting, to [illegible] New York, [illegible] a program [illegible] organization's activi[illegible]

[illegible] emphasis in national [illegible] will be on the establish[illegible] of permanent, long-range [illegible] programs for improving inter-group [illegible] while at the same time [illegible] alert to combat every [illegible] of anti-Semitism and [illegible] prejudice, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

[illegible] the international field, the organization pledged to continue [illegible] enlarged its foreign activities, [illegible] necessary resources, to [illegible] the social and economic [illegible] of Jewish communities [illegible] countries. The principal [illegible] facing the organization [illegible] toward Jewish life [illegible] by Dr. John Slawson, executive vice-president of the organization, who said:

"The challenge that America extends to the members of all ethnic, racial and religious groups that constitute its totality is two-fold: first, that they participate in, maintain, promote, and defend a common American civilization; second, that they deepen and enrich their special separate spiritual and cultural traditions. By being true and honestly themselves, without fear and without evasions, they will contribute most to the welfare of us all."

[illegible] Engel, chairman of [illegible] executive committee [illegible] A. J. C., discussing foreign [illegible] that Jews in Western [illegible] face major problems [illegible] reconstruction, while [illegible] Catholic countries [illegible] of [illegible]

He said that, in view of the need of Jewish communities of Europe, Latin America, the Middle East and Israel for assistance in making their position secure, the foreign affairs operations of the American Jewish Committee "can be curtailed only at the risk of impairing the health of our Jewish community."

Discussing Germany, Mr. Engel said that while the A. J. C. is concerned about the security and citizenship rights of 50,000 Jews likely to remain there after displaced persons camps are closed, it is even more seriously worried about democratizing that country.

Alan M. Stroock, a vice-president of the organization, said that the A. J. C. must seek new answers to the problem of the security of Jewish life in the United States. He said that the centers of Jewish cultural and spiritual life were in the United States and Israel. The committee's program, he said, must embrace a "developed philosophy of Jewish life which expresses the innermost aspirations of the Jewish community and which is able to convert these aspirations into convictions and a guide for living for American Jews."

Jacob Blaustein, industrialist, of Baltimore, Maryland and adviser on petroleum problems to the United States Department of Interior, was unanimously elected to his second term as president of the organization.

Officials called on the delegates to participate more actively in welfare fund campaigns in their communities on behalf of the Joint Defense Appeal, which is the fund-raising arm of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith. The organization has been shifting its emphasis from fighting "crackpots", such as the Ku-Klux Klan and the Silver Shirts, to working in the broader field of protection of constitutional rights.

The delegates were divided into five "workshop" groups where specific community problems were discussed. At the general session Murray I. Gurfein, chairman of the workshop groups, explained that new approaches must be used if the organization's work is to continue effectively.

President Truman, in a message to Jacob Blaustein, president of the committee, supported the view that progress has been made in the direction of racial and religious amity.

"The American Jewish Committee," President Truman wrote, "has fought 'the good fight' for forty-three years. During this first half of the twentieth century we have seen, despite momentary set-

Christian Mission To Jerusalem Is Sternly Against International City Plan of U.N.

A fact-finding mission of six Christian leaders, just returned from Jerusalem, announced its conviction that internationalization of the Holy City was "dangerous and unnecessary." The group recommended, instead, the establishment of a United Nations Commission "with no sovereignty" to assure the "free accessibility of the Christian world to the holy places of Jerusalem."

"Guarantees should be given to such a commission by both Jordan and Israel," the report said, "assuring the freedom and sanctity of the sacred places within their territories. This is all that the Christian world has a right to require of two sovereign states, which we believe will in time compose their differences. This making of the peace will be accomplished all the more if Israel and Jordan are encouraged in their negotiations by the Western powers."

Members of the investigation mission, who traveled under auspices of the American Christian Palestine Committee, 41 East Forty-second Street, New York, included Dr. Samuel Guy Inman, member of the Federal Council of Churches' Commission of International Goodwill; Dr. Charles J. Turck, president of Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn., and president of the National Council of Presbyterian Laymen; Mrs. M. E. Tilly, member of President Truman's Commission on Civil Rights and field representative of the Southern Regional Council.

Also Dr. John W. Bradbury, editor of The Watchman-Examiner, national Baptist magazine; Dr. Ralph W. Riley, president of the American Baptist Theological Seminary, and Prof. Victor Obenhaus of the University of Chicago, national chairman of the Council of Social Action, Congregational Christian Church of America.

The group's findings were made public in a conference in the Commodore Hotel, in New York, with Dr. Inman and Dr. Bradbury as spokesmen. They announced that copies of the report had been sent to Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Roger Garreau, president of the United Nations Trusteeship Council, and Francis B. Sayre, United States delegate to the council.

The report said that the "overwhelming majority" of religious leaders interviewed in Israel had felt that the internationalization plan would not work. "Many held it was impractical and certain to add confusion and impede peace negotiations now in progress," the report declared, and added:

"Total internationalization is not necessary for the protection of the Holy places. Neither the Arabs nor Israel has any other plan or purpose than to protect and preserve them. Moslems have kept these places inviolate for many centuries, and virtually all of them are now in Arab hands. There is not the slightest evidence that Israel will molest or limit the use of any religious institution or shrine."

The group said it found "complete religious freedom" in Israel and that the religious leaders interviewed "all declared they were in no ways interfered with in their functions."

"The prevailing conviction was," the report went on, "that when the bitterness created by the recent war will have diminished, Israel and the Arabs would yet come to an agreement in these controversial matters, providing external interference did not complicate the problem."

The mission denounced as "utterly false and without any factual support" reports that the Israelis had desecrated religious institutions, churches or shrines since the fighting ceased, says the New York Times. It pointed out that the Government of Israel had established a Department of Religious Affairs to deal "constructively and fairly with the complex religious communities in her territory."

The report referred to the plan advanced by Mr. Garreau, which provides that the international zone should include principally the

Germans Grant Claims Are Due Jews

West Germans might pay about $600,000,000 in goods for what had been extorted by Hitler from the Jews who lived in Western Germany under the Nazis, and about a third of this compensation might be transferred to Israel in the form of pre-fabricated houses, irrigation pipes, machinery and other nonconsumer goods, according to the New York Times.

The Jewish Agency Executive and the World Zionist Organization, meeting in Jerusalem, were told by Dr. George Landauer, one of the top Zionist officials, that about 350,000 claims are listed by various Jewish organizations or individual Jewish survivors.

"(West) German authorities recognized the principle of these claims," said Dr. Israel Goldstein, United States member of the Jewish Agency executive and chairman of the Jewish restitution organization of the United States zone of Germany.

Part of the claims are filed on behalf of Jewish communal property, for which the Jewish Agency and the American-Jewish Joint Distribution Committee are recognized as beneficiaries. A third of the claims are those of German Jews now in Israel, and two-thirds are those of Jews now in other countries, including Germany itself. For the small number of Jews in Germany, payment in goods might mean that they could get the means to emigrate and build new lives elsewhere.

New Synagogue Is Memorial To Wise

The new building of the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue, at 30 West Sixty-eighth Street, New York, was dedicated at a special service as a living memorial to the late Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, founder and leader of the synagogue since 1907. The five-story structure, completed last week, adjoins the old Free Synagogue quarters now occupied by the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion.

John Haynes Holmes, minister emeritus of the Community church and a long-time friend of Dr. Wise, who died in April, was the principal speaker at the dedication. He said the new synagogue was built "not to bear a name merely, but to keep alive the heroic sacrifices and labors of which that familiar name is a symbol." The congregation, he said, must perpetuate freedom of the pulpit and maintain doors open to men of all faiths in the spirit of the founder.

"Who was a Jew, and more than a Jew," Mr. Holmes said. "He was a man who lifted up his voice and dedicated his life to all who needed aid. His parish was the world. So I bid you in upon these doors to all who would use them to foster the faith of brotherhood."

A special dedicatory ritual was [illegible] written by Rabbi Edward E. Klein, of the Free Synagogue, who also offered special memorial prayers for Dr. Wise. Others who participated in the dedication included Manchester Joseph, M. Levine, only living member of the congregation and its honorary president; Frederick L. Ehrman, president of the congregation; Rabbi Klein's two sons, [illegible]

SAYS ARABS ENTITLED TO HEBREW U. STUDY

An assurance that "every child of the 250,000 Arab population in Israel will be entitled as matter of right to an education at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem," was voiced in Washington by Professor Selig Brodetsky, the new president of the Hebrew University, at Jerusalem.

Speaking at a joint meeting of the Washington chapters of the American Friends of the Hebrew University and the American Technion Society, he declared: "Our university is a free institution and will be conducted without regard to race, creed or politics. There shall be no discrimination of any kind whatsoever." He pointed out that last December students representing 29 countries, including Ph.D. degree candidates from the United States.

J.D.C. TO UNDERTAKE DIRECT GENERAL AID PROGRAM IN ISRAEL

European officials of the American Joint Distribution Committee, major relief agency affiliated with the United Jewish Appeal, announced in Paris the virtual completion of the largest human salvage operation ever undertaken by a private philanthropy.

Since the end of World War II, these officials said, the Agency has moved 336,317 Jewish survivors of persecution and war to Israel and to other permanent havens of resettlement. Countless other Jewish victims were restored to health and productive life. In carrying out this vast program, the Committee spent $270,000,000.

It was reported that in 1949 alone, airplanes, steamers and trains chartered by the agency had moved nearly 250,000 Jews to new homes. In the same period, 30,000 heads of families were able to get off relief and back on their own feet thanks to the agency's reconstruction and aid programs. As the committee moved into the new year, its assistance operations were cut drastically in the displaced persons camps, and were suspended altogether in Cyprus, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

But a peculiarly difficult job still remains to be done, says the New York Times. Moses W. Beckelman, acting head of the American Joint Distribution Committee in Europe, described the Agency's efforts to relieve the plight of a "hard core" of Jewish survivors who, by reason of age or infirmity, remained in need of institutional care and could not easily be moved.

This "irreducible minimum" of some 75,000 helpless persons, Mr. Beckelman said, are still on the Committee's relief rolls and are likely to remain there for some time to come. He indicated that the Agency's work in behalf of these people would become particularly important if the International Refugee Organization were to close up shop, as planned, by the end of next June.

At present, the IRO provides basic care and maintenance for most, but not all, Jewish "hard core" survivors, while supplementary food, clothing, medicines and other assistance are provided by the committee. The program of the committee includes support of sanatoria, homes for the aged, hospitals, clinics, rehabilitation centers and other installations.

The IRO is conducting negotiations with a number of Western European countries with a view to obtaining maximum coverage by national social security systems for its "hard core" cases. Officials of the IRO and of the Joint Distribution Committee feel that the governments should have ultimate responsibility for such persons.

However, coverage of this kind, would not extend to some 4,000 aged and infirm Jews still in German, Austrian, and Italian camps for displaced persons. Counting dependents, this group is said to number nearly 10,000, who have no government to which they may turn and no desire to live out their lives on soil drenched with the blood of their own families.

Consequently, the Committee recently signed an agreement with the Government of Israel and with the Jewish Agency for Palestine providing for the emigration of these people to Israel, where care and treatment will be made available to them. In application of the agreement, the Committee will contribute $7,500,000 to a special $15,000,000 fund. The IRO has made an additional grant of $2,500,000 to help carry out the program.

Mr. Beckelman said the agreement marked a "new departure" for the Committee, which had never before undertaken a direct general aid program in Israel, according to the New York Times. He added that four new 100-bed hospitals already were under construction.

In summing up the Committee's [illegible] for 1950, Mr. Beckelman [illegible] long-term cases were entirely dependent on the Committee for the assistance they needed to remain alive, because they were ineligible for IRO aid or because they were living in Eastern European countries where the IRO did not operate.

In U.S. To Discuss Return Of Hebrew U. To Mt. Scopus

Discussions are now under way in "highest diplomatic circles" to allow the Hebrew University in Jerusalem to reoccupy its campus atop Arab-held Mount Scopus, it was disclosed by Dr. Selig Brodetsky, president of the university, at a news conference at the headquarters of the American Friends of the Hebrew University, 9 East Eighty-ninth Street, New York. The Israeli educator said he saw "no real differences" preventing such action because the Arabs earlier had "agreed in principle" to opening a Jewish route to Mount Scopus.

Despite the inadequacies of the university's present makeshift quarters in Jerusalem, he said, the school this year has a record enrollment of 1,300 students, including several Americans. An enrollment of 2,000 is predicted for next year.

Convoys have passed through Arab lines recently, Dr. Brodetsky said, and have found the buildings atop Mount Scopus in good condition and the library intact. Founded in April, 1925, the Hebrew University has substantially expanded its curriculum during the past year, despite lack of funds and facilities, he observed. Six months ago, a separate department of medicine was established and on November 28 a law school was opened.

Dr. Brodetsky was appointed to his present post last October after having been associated with the university since 1928. A former head of the mathematics department and Professor Emeritus at Leeds College, England, he has also served as chairman of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, president of the Maccabee World Organization and since 1929 has held office in the Jewish Agency. He is in the U. S. to discuss university problems and expects to return home at the end of the month.

URGES TRAINING GIRLS FOR MOTHERHOOD

Youngsters should be trained from early childhood for the goal of marriage and family life, Dr. Lena Levine, psychiatrist, said in "The Modern Woman and Her Family," presented by the Brooklyn section of the National Council of Jewish Women.

Discussing the role of the mother in strengthening family ties, Dr. Levine said that changes in family life brought about by a shift from authoritarian to freer and more democratic attitudes had complicated woman's lot.

Some of the "good, sound old values" may be lost in the process unless they are "reworked and refitted into our newer, freer way of life," Dr. Levine declared. She advised training a girl for motherhood even before her marriage, teaching her that children make different demands at different ages, helping her to meet these and at the same time to maintain her own interests, so that she will be able to "relinquish" the youngsters when the time comes.

It is important to remember, Dr. Levine declared, that even as the children are growing, the mother is developing, too, as an individual and in relationship to and with her husband. She must realize that she will have a life alone with her husband after the children are grown and she must have some feeling of her own worth and ability apart from her role as mother, the lecturer said.

Miss Quinn Is In The News Again

A bitter dispute over Superintendent of Schools William Jansen's handling of the case of Miss May A. Quinn, Brooklyn, N.Y., civics teacher accused of making anti-Negro remarks, erupted at a meeting of the Board of Education.

Three years ago after allegedly using an anti-Semitic tract in a class, Miss Quinn was reprimanded by the Board of Education, fined two month's salary and transferred from the school where she had been teaching.

The dispute came at the meeting in its headquarters at 110 Livingston Street, Brooklyn, when Arthur Schutzer, executive secretary of the state American Labor party, demanded that the board hold an immediate public hearing on the case of Miss Quinn. Dr. Jansen had personally rebuked Miss Quinn for making "ill-considered statements" about Negroes in class. He held, however, that she had not intended "to offend the Negro people or to justify discrimination."

Replying to Mr. Schutzer's demand, which was applauded by 200 persons attending the meeting, Maximilian Moss, the board president, noted that Miss Quinn's case was not on the board calendar and that discussion concerning it was out of order. Mr. Moss said that Dr. Jansen had acted "in discretion of his powers under the law" and had taken action as he deemed fit.

This explanation did not satisfy Mr. Schutzer, who asserted that "the people of New York are shocked by the Superintendent's action." Mr. Moss then repeated in substance his previous statement and added that the board members were without power to pursue the matter.

After further argument, Mr. Schutzer said that he would be "more impressed with the law if the Superintendent didn't engage in witch hunts against teachers." This was taken by some observers to refer to reported investigations of teachers suspected of Communist party membership.

At this, Mr. Moss slammed down his gavel and above the uproar declared the meeting closed. Mr. Schutzer's parting words were: "I can assure you that we have just begun to fight."

Newcomers Still Go To East Side First

Back in 1890, a tiny dispensary opened on the lower East Side of New York and many of the patients who turned up for treatment were immigrants. Now, sixty years later, the dispensary has grown into Beth Israel Hospital, a big modern building on Stuyvesant Square. And again many of the patients are new in the U. S.

This repetion of the hospital's history was described by Charles H. Silver, its president, who is also vice-president of the American Woolen Company, and by Dr. Maxwell Frank, its executive director.

"We've been confronted by an unexpected challenge," Mr. Silver said. "But we're going to meet it."

Since the end of the war, increasing numbers of former displaced persons have been following generations of immigrants, Mr. Silver said.

"Right from the ship, they come to the East Side," he said. "They may move away after awhile, but they come there first. And when they are sick, they come to us."

Although they must be free of major illnesses to obtain visas, the former prisoners develop a "normal amount" of sickness — and there are no special provisions for their medical care once they are.

"That's where we come in," Mr. Silver said.

Situated as it is on the outskirts of the crowded East Side tenement district, Beth Israel attracts newcomers of all faiths, he said, adding that it also draws Jewish refugees who live in other parts of the city because it is operated in accord with Orthodox religious principles.

Hospital officials have been noticing for months that many of the patients—those appearing at the clinics as well as those requiring bed care—are new in the country, Dr. Frank said, but the extent of the trend was not realized until a study of records for 1949 was completed.

"The figures amazed us," Dr. Frank said. "In the twelve months of 1949 there were 10,000 of a total of 70,000 clinic visits made by refugees. This is about 14 per cent. But by December the refugee visits had reached 28 per cent."

Hospital admission records showed smaller numbers of new arrivals, but during the year 226 refugees, stayed a total of 2,684 days in the institution. Much of this care was provided free or for a minimum fee — just as similar care is given to non-refugee patients who cannot afford to pay for it. Dr. Frank estimated that the hospital had spent about $100,000 during 1949 in providing care for newcomers.

No hard and fast rules for hygienic and healthful living can be set for everyone because no two persons are completely alike. However, there are fundamental, common sense natural laws which all must follow to keep well.

ABC and HIGH STANDARDS GO TOGETHER

In qualifying for membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations, publishers are doing more than providing advertisers with the facts about the circulation of their publications.

They are also giving active support to the principle that advertising space should be bought and sold only on the basis of verified information — a principle that has contributed in large measure to the interests of all advertisers.

In Canada, the Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

RABBIS CONDUCT RETREATS FOR CHAPLAINS

Religious retreats for Jewish chaplains serving the U.S. Armed Forces in the Hawaiian Islands and the Caribbean area are being conducted during January and February by two rabbis affiliated with the Division of Religious Activities of the National Jewish Welfare Board, Rabbi Abraham Feldman, leader of Congregation Beth Israel, of Hartford, Conn., and former president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, will conduct the retreat in the Hawaiian Islands; and Rabbi David Max Eichhorn, former Army chaplain and now director of field operations of the Division of Religious Activities of JWB, is conducting two retreats in the Caribbean.

These retreats are part of the Department of Defense's policy of sending teams of civilian clergymen, two Protestant ministers, a Roman Catholic priest and a rabbi, to the six theatres of operations overseas (Alaska, England, Hawaii, Japan, Europe, and Caribbean) annually in order that these teams may conduct religious retreats for the chaplains of their respective denominations. Each retreat will last from three to five days. Some of the sessions will involve chaplains of all denominations and others will be on a separate basis for discussion of denominational problems. The Air Force is responsible for the retreats in Alaska and England, the Army for those in Japan and Europe, and the Navy for those in Hawaii and Caribbean.

A daily ordeal on a crowded streetcar or bus offers no advantages — only an ample opportunity to exchange disease germs with your neighbor. Why not try walking to and from work or, if the distance is too great, at least part of the way? You'll find it a healthy, invigorating way to start the day. Your appetite, your health and your spirits will be better for the change.

CLASS IN COOKERY

PECAN ROLL

one-half pound butter
one cup sugar
five eggs
six level cups all-purpose flour
pinch of salt
two yeast cakes
three-quarters cup lukewarm milk grated rind of one lemon
one-half cup of sour cream

Dissolve yeast cakes in lukewarm milk, on top of stove, or on top of kettle, so long as it is a very warm place; and leave for about ten minutes, or until yeast is fluffy, and bubbles. Cream butter and sugar; add eggs, and mix well. Then add yeast and milk mixture alternately with half the flour. Then add the other half of the flour alternately with the sour cream. Lastly, add grated rind. Let dough rise until double its bulk; and then place in refrigerator overnight. Take out, and leave in kitchen for about one-half hour; then roll up, as for a jelly roll, covering with sugar, cinnamon, and a small amount of raisins. Cut into pieces. Butter an angel-cake tin, and sprinkle the bottom and sides with cinnamon, brown sugar, and pecans. Stand up the cut pieces in a circle around the tube in the pan; if there is a space around the centre, add the remaining pieces of dough. Sprinkle the top with cinnamon, brown sugar and pecans. Let rise until double its bulk, and then bake in a moderate oven until lightly-brown; and then reduce oven heat slightly until done. This should take about thirty-five minutes.

Mrs. Bernard Halpern,

229 Elm Avenue, Montreal

This recipe won third prize in the cake-baking contest held by the Sisterhood of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue.

JAM CAKE

one-half cup butter and shortening combined one cup granulated sugar three-quarters cup jam (strawberry) two eggs
one-quarter cup sour milk
one teaspoon baking soda
two cups sifted cake or pastry flour

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Line two eight-inch cake tins with waxed paper. Beat butter and shortening till soft. Blend in sugar thoroughly, then the jam. Add well beaten eggs. Mix and sift dry ingredients, including baking soda, and add to the batter alternately with the sour milk. Pour mixture into prepared tin. Bake in moderate oven for twenty to thirty minutes.

Lemon Frosting

one tablespoon grated orange rind
one tablespoon lemon juice
one egg yolk
one-half teaspoon water few grains salt
one and one-half cups icing sugar

Beat egg yolk and salt slightly. Mix rind and water and add to egg alternately with icing sugar. Beat until smooth. Spread on cooled cake.

Mrs. S. Bliman,

81 Borden Street, Toronto.

Correction: In the recipe for Date Crunchies, by Mrs. I. Weinberg, 410 Richview Avenue, Toronto, the right amount of condensed milk is one and one-third cup.

Is Named Rabbi For Life After 32 Years

Dr. Israel Goldstein, leader of Congregation Bnai Jeshurun, 257 West Eighty-eighth Street, in New York, was named its rabbi for life. The action, initiated by the congregation's board of trustees, was ratified at the 124th annual meeting of the membership in the Community Center, 270 West Eighty-ninth Street. Dr. Goldstein has been rabbi of the congregation since 1918.

In the thirty-two years of his association with the congregation, Dr. Goldstein has achieved international prominence as a Zionist as well as a religious leader, holding many top posts in Zionist and religious organizations. He is chairman of the World Confederation of General Zionists and president of the Jewish Conciliation Board of America. He is a member of the Jewish Agency Executive.

In 1948 he was national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, after which he spent a year in Israel as treasurer of the Jewish Agency for Palestine. He is honorary president of the Jewish National Fund, which he headed from 1933 to 1942.

In recognition of his services the Jewish National Fund in 1942 established the Israel Goldstein Tract of 1,250 acres in the Negeb in Israel. In 1946 the Israel Goldstein Lectureship was established at the Jewish Theological Seminary.

In the three decades of his ministry at Bnai Jeshurun the congregation has grown until now more than 1,000 families are associated with the synagogue. Many of the members are active in communal and civic affairs and last year they contributed more than $1,500,000 to the U.J.A. The Community Center, built in 1923, is used as a meeting place by more than 100 Jewish organizations.

the Village Church at the invitation of Dr. Stitt.

The congregation itself had been formed only four months before, holding services in the Hotel Brevort, Fifth Avenue and Eighth Street, first in the Blue Room of the hotel, and later, as it grew larger, in the Crystal Ballroom. Today the congregation consists of more than two hundred persons, and Friday evening services are held each week in the Village Church. Association between the two congregations includes the Lemonade Opera, which has its theater in the church's basement and is reached through the Greenwich Village mews separating the church from the parish house.

Christians, Jews Hold Joint Service

The Ark of the Covenant and the Cross—symbols of the Jewish and Christian faiths—were used together in New York, in the Village Presbyterian Church, 139-141 West Thirteenth Street, where a minister and a rabbi jointly conducted a special inter-faith service. The minister was the Rev. Dr. Jesse William Stitt, and the rabbi was Julian F. Fleg, of the Congregation of Bnai Israel of Greenwich Village.

The Holy Ark, marked with the Star of David, was open and lighted behind the pulpit. On a table in front of the pulpit was the Cross, flanked by two altar candles, and at each end of the table were the seven-branched candelabra of the Jewish faith. Of the main Judaistic symbols, only the everlasting light was missing.

Attended by both the Presbyterian congregation and the Congregation of Bnai Israel, the service was conducted in both English and Hebrew and made use of the Christian hymnal and the Jewish prayer book alternately. Throughout the service Dr. Stitt and Rabbi Fleg offered a few marginal explanations.

In a brief introduction after the processional hymn, "America," Dr. Stitt explained the purpose of the inter-faith service and expressed the hope that it might lesson "the conflict between the races which has brought great shame on all sorts and conditions of men."

Dr. Stitt and Rabbi Fleg stood in the pulpit together to deliver the sermon. It consisted of a forty-minute dialogue on "The Unknown Soldier Speaks," with Dr. Stitt taking the part of the soldier and Rabbi Fleg that of a visitor to his grave. Arguing the case of pacifism, the Uknown Soldier, in this dialogue, said that "wars would not be fought if man refused to fight them."

To prepare for this special service, Dr. Stitt and Rabbi Fleg worked together for several weeks. Their association dates only from January 7, when the Congregation of Bnai Israel first worshiped in

The Egyptian

A sensational novel which occupies first place rightly on "the best seller list" has but recently come off press. The book is the work of Mika Waltari, a Finnish writer, who had this novel published in 1945 in his own language and the translation of which reached the English speaking world recently. That this novel might be rightly understood, one must know something of archaeology, for the story is rooted in the ancient civilization of Egypt. Because rain and frost are rare in Egypt the ancient monuments have been well preserved and thus the student of archaeology has the instruments by which to reach the ancient past.

Commencing with the seventeenth century European travellers have from time to time brought to Europe from Egypt some antiquities. Napoleon invaded Egypt in 1798 and he was accompanied by an army of eminent scholars as well as soldiers. It is estimated that one hundred prominent scholars came along with Napoleon. The latter made remarkable discoveries in Egypt of its ancient civilization, and since Egypt came under English control in 1802, explorations were fostered by the government.

One of the most precious monuments of ancient Egypt is the Rosetta Stone (200 B.C.). This stone, which has inscriptions in three languages, was finally deciphered in 1818 by Jean Francois Champollion, a French scholar. Through this stone the key was found to the reading of Egyptian hieroglyphics. Through this key the doors of ancient monuments were unlocked. Along with the Rosetta Stone was the discovery of The El-Amarna Letters in 1887 and these letters, written upon clay tablets, give to us much information regarding in particular the Pharaoh of Egypt known as King Akhnaton.

The novel by Waltari has to do with the story primarily of King Akhnaton, who, in 1375 B.C. to 1350 B.C., ruled over Egypt. It has to do with the struggle of this King in the attempt to disseminate the worship of one God. It is through Sinuhe, the physician who was driven from Thebes in the 6th year of the reign of Pharaoh Horemheb, that we learn of the struggle of this royal architect of a new religion which so closely approximated the religion of Moses. In this novel we have the record of Sinuhe's travels through the entire Near East and thus we get a vivid description of the ancient civilizations not only of Egypt, but of Babylon, the Khaberi, Crete and Smyrna.

Primarily, the novel conveys to the reader in most vivid description how truth in the 14th century before the present era was crushed by vested interests and a fanatical Egyptian priesthood. For King Akhnaton preached the doctrine of the oneness of God and the oneness of humanity. The result of this doctrine meant that everywhere people were to live by the laws of justice, by the laws of brotherhood and peace. When Akhnaton, this great idealist and humanitarian, found it difficult to carry on his teachings in the Capital of Thebes, he ventured to establish a new city where pacifism could dominate and the citizens of it live on terms of peace.

But soon Akhnaton and the religion which he founded came to an end and thus the truth of the new religion was crushed. But truth crushed does rise again. Thus through the monuments of ancient Egypt, but recently discovered, we have come to learn of the greatness and the glory of this king, idealist and benefactor of mankind.

Why did Akhnaton fail? Why did the fanatical priests of Egypt succeed destroying the great faith and religion of this noble Pharaoh? Might it not be due to the fact that Akhnaton ran away from the struggle and did not remain to battle the idolatry of his day? Moses succeeded because, in the face of the Jews worshipping a golden calf, he dared to throw the tablets of the Moral Law at them and shatter these tablets and still continue in the struggle for the establishment of the worship of the one God.

The lesson of the story conveys the truth that the prophetic teacher must never flee from his mission. If need be, he must struggle, sacrifice, and die in the cause of his teachings.

Because we are living at a time when our faith in the triumph of truth has lessened and because we have seen how a Hitler could by lies transform a people to worship the gods of falsehood, we welcome this book by Waltari which has for its object the warning that though truth be crushed it is destined to rise again even as in the case of that great Egyptian Akhnaton, the founder of a great faith which was destroyed for a while in human history.

This novel by Waltari has been translated in many European languages and the people of Europe who live behind or near the Iron Curtain will find in it many parallels of their own present battle for freedom and truth. We recommend the reading of this novel by all who wish to get an authentic description of ancient history and ancient civilization and at the same time obtain therefrom lessons for our own broken humanity which is so at present threatened and which may come to an end if we fail in the espousal of truth above all else.

JEWS, CATHOLICS STAND BY NEGROES

The state commander of the Jewish War Veterans and the New York County commander of the Catholic War Veterans endorsed Attorney General Nathaniel L. Goldstein's action to bar the American Bowling Congress from New York State.

Mr. Goldstein, in a complaint filed in Supreme Court, said that the "sanctity" organization limited its United States membership to "white males" only. He called this a restriction contrary to the public policy. Many telegrams commending his stand were received at Mr. Goldstein's office.

Terence Rempel, commander of the Catholic War Veterans of New York County, said that his organization was behind the state prosecutor "100 per cent." Arthur J. Aronson, state Jewish War Veterans commander, declared that his organization was "shocked at this flagrant practice of racial discrimination in a field whose membership rosters have always been studded with top Negro stars."

backs, great over-all progress made in eradicating prejudice and hatred among the races and religions of our citizens. This progress has been attributable to an awakening consciousness of and awareness by the American people of the great principles of the prophets of old and fundamental tenets of our Constitution. The American Jewish Committee and other great organizations have contributed materially to this progress."

In one of the workshop sessions devoted to "overcoming racial and religious tensions", it was agreed that responsibility for allaying these tensions and starting long-range programs to improve intergroup relations rests on all groups in the community. Among the groups mentioned specifically as being able to promote a sound program of community relations were mayors' committees on human rights, persons doing work in intercultural education, clergy institutes, police with special training, labor and business leaders, newspaper men and teachers.

Some of the activities which the American Jewish Committee recommended to its members throughout the country to utilize in fighting prejudice were:

Advocating the establishment of agencies adequate to cope with emergency situations, and service on the boards and committees of such agencies; recommending to suitable organizations that they study local areas of group tension, diagnose the basic causes for unrest and propose remedial measures; maintain a long-range chapter program of community relations, with various committees of the (American Jewish Committee) chapter engaged in specific projects designed to improve group relations.

Herbert B. Ehrmann, of Boston, Mass., a national vice-president of the Committee, in the workshop on "Education Among Jewish Groups" said that the majority of American Jews, rejecting both nationalism and assimilation, are expressing a need for education and guidance in evaluating themselves.

"They have confidence in the American dream with its promise of social equality and security," Mr. Ehrmann said, "but they need to know what it is in the American tradition, the Jewish heritage, and the development of American democracy, that guarantees a continuing security and participation in this country's future for themselves and their children."

CHRISTIAN MISSION

Wailing Wall, sacred to the Jewish faith, and those Holy places sacred to Christians, and said the plan, while an improvement over previous proposals, was "still to inclusive."

"It is hardly justifiable to exclude so obvious a holy place as the Mosque of Omar of the Old City from an internationalized zone, and the entire Mount Scopus where absolutely no legally established holy places are to be found," the report observed. "To advance such a plan on the ground that the territory to be taken from Israel and Jordan must be equalized is to condemn the plan by demonstrating that the major consideration is not concern for the holy places."
